Census Taker Finds City's Oldest Man in Lunch Room

*Jacob St. Lawrence, just 98,
Answers Questions of Enumerator From Stool.*

Jacob St. Lawrence, who rooms alone at 609 East Second street, is the oldest man in Des Moines. Anyway he is the oldest man yet enumerated by the state census takers working earnestly just now in an effort to put Des Moines in the 100,000 population class.

When Enumerator C. F. St. John discovered the aged resident late Saturday afternoon the veteran of almost a century was perched comfortably upon a stool in a quick lunch counter on Court avenue.

"How old?" asked the old man in response to the enumerator's question? "Why ninety-eight. Just ninety-eight."

"Yes, I came to Iowa seventy-four years ago from St. Lawrenceburg, N. Y., where I was born in 1816. I settled at the old Raccoon fort. The soldiers came the next year."

"Well you're the oldest person we've found thus far," commented St. John. "How do you feel anyway?"

"Fine as a fiddle," replied the old gentleman animatedly. "I want a job, though. I can use a pitchfork with considerable skill and I have been at the city for a job for a long time but there doesn't seem to be any chance."

"How do I account for my age?" The question was one savoring of childlike surprise, according to St. John.

"Why I just haven't died. I guess that's all," and the old man chuckled gleefully at this little joke.

"You see," he explained readily, as he sipped at his black coffee, "my father lived to be 103 and my mother died at the age of 106. I ought to be good for sometime yet, eh?" and again he chuckled.

Jacob has never smoked but chews tobacco regularly. He has never taken whisky but likes "a little beer when the weather is hot." He has been married twice, his second wife having died two years ago. He walks several blocks three times a day to his meals, never thinks of taking a street car and is aided in his little across town journeys by a cane.

St. Lawrence belongs to the Friends church. He looks twenty years younger than he really is, according to those who know him, and he is always cheerful.

This packet contains the first 65 pages of the first duplicate of the record of BIRTHS, as filed in the office of the Clerk of Court of Ida County, Ida Grove, Iowa. The records date from July, 1880.—1887

These records were copies in 1955 and the work will be continued in 1956. When it is completed to 1900 the balance of the first duplicate and the entire original set of copies will be sent in for binding, together with an index of the father's names. A more complete index is not possible inasmuch as most children were recorded as merely "male" or "female".
